Prevention Resource Centers (PRCs) are programs funded by the Texas Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC) to provide data and information related to substance use and misuse, and to support prevention collaboration efforts in the community.

Prevention Resource Centers have four fundamental objectives related to services provided to partner agencies and the community in general:

- (2) ensure the sustainability of a Regional Epidemiological Workgroup focused on identifying strategies related to data collection, gaps in data, and prevention needs
- (3) coordinate regional prevention trainings and conduct media awareness activities related to risks and consequences of alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs (ATOD) use
- (4) conduct voluntary compliance checks and education on state tobacco laws to retailers
